Version 1.0 (Released 6/27/23)

The U.S. Census Bureau released public-use data from the 2022 Survey of Income and Program Participation (2022 SIPP). The data are available in SAS, Stata, and pipe-delimited text formats. Accompanying the data release are several supporting materials, including:

(1) An online, interactive codebook tool for browsing and searching metadata
(2) An updated Users' Guide to assist data users and provide background on the survey
(3) The 2022 SIPP instrument specifications detailing question wording and response categories
(4) A data dictionary PDF providing metadata for all variables in the 2022 dataset
(5) User notes describing nuances and other data issues that users should be aware of
(6) Crosswalks that map 2022 SIPP variables to their 2021 SIPP analogues, and vice versa

SIPP provides comprehensive information about the income and program participation of individuals and households in the United States. The survey collects data and measures change for many topics, including economic well-being, family dynamics, education, assets, health insurance, child care, and food security. SIPP is a longitudinal survey – following the same set of respondents over a multi-year period – allowing researchers to understand how these contexts change over time.

The 2022 SIPP continued to face data collection complications because of increasing costs and a general lower-than-average unit response rate nationally. For technical documentation and more information about SIPP data quality, please visit the Technical Documentation page at <https://www.census.gov/programs-surveys/sipp/tech-documentation.html>.

All 2022 SIPP data-release materials are available on the SIPP website at <www.census.gov/sipp>. Additional announcements, including notifications of version updates, will be made as necessary through the SIPP website and the SIPP email notification system.
