The U.S. Census Bureau released public-use data from the 2024 Survey of Income and Program Participation (2024 SIPP). The data are available in SAS, Stata, and pipe-delimited text formats. Accompanying the data release are several supporting materials, including:

(1) An updated Users' Guide to assist data users and provide comprehensive survey information
(2) Data Primers with introductory guidance for working with SIPP data and selecting survey weights
(3) An online, interactive codebook tool for browsing and searching metadata
(4) A data dictionary PDF providing metadata for all variables in the 2024 dataset
(5) User notes describing nuances and other data issues that users should be aware of
(6) The 2024 SIPP instrument specifications detailing question wording and response categories
(7) Crosswalks that map 2024 SIPP variables to their 2023 SIPP analogues, and vice versa

The SIPP provides comprehensive information about the income and program participation of individuals and households in the United States. The survey collects data and measures change for many topics, including economic well-being, family dynamics, education, assets, health insurance, child care, and food security. SIPP is a longitudinal survey – following the same set of respondents over a multi-year period – allowing researchers to understand how these contexts change over time.

The 2024 SIPP continued to face data collection complications because of increasing costs and a general lower-than-average unit response rate nationally. For technical documentation and more information about SIPP data quality, please visit the Technical Documentation page at <https://www.census.gov/programs-surveys/sipp/tech-documentation.html>.

All 2024 SIPP data-release materials are available on the SIPP website at <https://www.census.gov/programs-surveys/sipp.html>. Additional announcements, including notifications of version updates, will be made as necessary through the SIPP website and the SIPP email notification system.
